Belmont — The Belknap County 4-H Fair celebrated its 50th anniversary this weekend with a family-friendly line-up of events, such as horse and tractor pull, animal shows, and live entertainment.

The Belknap County 4-H Fair began in 1963 as a place where children could practice the competition of showing their dairy animals, and has since developed into a strong tradition.

“We have a lot of fun with the kids, but it’s also about teaching them responsibility,” said Chief Mark Lewandoski, who took over leadership of the Belknap County 4-H Fair in January, said his goal was to make sure the Department was “as active within the community as we can be.” There’s a general belief that 4-H should be a safe place for kids, and Lewandoski said he took that very seriously.

Lewandoski, who took over as head of the Department in January, said his goal was to make sure the Department was “as active within the community as we can be.” There’s a general belief that 4-H should be a safe place for kids, and Lewandoski said he took that very seriously.

National Night Out offers safety lessons officials a chance to engage with community

BY COURTNEY PELLETIER

BELMONT — All across America, Tuesday, Aug. 6, more than 450 communities across New Hampshire observed National Night Out. Some 40 communities in the Belknap County area participated.

National Night Out, held annually on the first Tuesday of August, is a safety campaign held in communities across the U.S. that was created by the National Association of Police Organizations in 1984. The event is designed to bring concerns of the community to the attention of local officials, and to create a positive atmosphere that encourages community members to talk about public safety issues.

The Belknap County 4-H Fair celebrated its 50th anniversary this weekend with a family-friendly line-up of events, such as horse and tractor pull, animal shows, and live entertainment.

The Belknap County 4-H Fair began in 1963 as a place where children could practice the competition of showing their dairy animals, and has since developed into a strong tradition.

“We have a lot of fun with the kids, but it’s also about teaching them responsibility,” said Chief Mark Lewandoski, who took over leadership of the Belknap County 4-H Fair in January, said his goal was to make sure the Department was “as active within the community as we can be.” There’s a general belief that 4-H should be a safe place for kids, and Lewandoski said he took that very seriously.

Lewandoski, who took over as head of the Department in January, said his goal was to make sure the Department was “as active within the community as we can be.” There’s a general belief that 4-H should be a safe place for kids, and Lewandoski said he took that very seriously.

National Night Out offers safety lessons officials a chance to engage with community

BY COURTNEY PELLETIER

BELMONT — All across America, Tuesday, Aug. 6, more than 450 communities across New Hampshire observed National Night Out. Some 40 communities in the Belknap County area participated.

National Night Out, held annually on the first Tuesday of August, is a safety campaign held in communities across the U.S. that was created by the National Association of Police Organizations in 1984. The event is designed to bring concerns of the community to the attention of local officials, and to create a positive atmosphere that encourages community members to talk about public safety issues.

The Belknap County 4-H Fair celebrated its 50th anniversary this weekend with a family-friendly line-up of events, such as horse and tractor pull, animal shows, and live entertainment.

The Belknap County 4-H Fair began in 1963 as a place where children could practice the competition of showing their dairy animals, and has since developed into a strong tradition.

“We have a lot of fun with the kids, but it’s also about teaching them responsibility,” said Chief Mark Lewandoski, who took over leadership of the Belknap County 4-H Fair in January, said his goal was to make sure the Department was “as active within the community as we can be.” There’s a general belief that 4-H should be a safe place for kids, and Lewandoski said he took that very seriously.

Lewandoski, who took over as head of the Department in January, said his goal was to make sure the Department was “as active within the community as we can be.” There’s a general belief that 4-H should be a safe place for kids, and Lewandoski said he took that very seriously.

National Night Out offers safety lessons officials a chance to engage with community

BY COURTNEY PELLETIER

BELMONT — All across America, Tuesday, Aug. 6, more than 450 communities across New Hampshire observed National Night Out. Some 40 communities in the Belknap County area participated.

National Night Out, held annually on the first Tuesday of August, is a safety campaign held in communities across the U.S. that was created by the National Association of Police Organizations in 1984. The event is designed to bring concerns of the community to the attention of local officials, and to create a positive atmosphere that encourages community members to talk about public safety issues.

The Belknap County 4-H Fair celebrated its 50th anniversary this weekend with a family-friendly line-up of events, such as horse and tractor pull, animal shows, and live entertainment.

The Belknap County 4-H Fair began in 1963 as a place where children could practice the competition of showing their dairy animals, and has since developed into a strong tradition.

“We have a lot of fun with the kids, but it’s also about teaching them responsibility,” said Chief Mark Lewandoski, who took over leadership of the Belknap County 4-H Fair in January, said his goal was to make sure the Department was “as active within the community as we can be.” There’s a general belief that 4-H should be a safe place for kids, and Lewandoski said he took that very seriously.

Lewandoski, who took over as head of the Department in January, said his goal was to make sure the Department was “as active within the community as we can be.” There’s a general belief that 4-H should be a safe place for kids, and Lewandoski said he took that very seriously.

National Night Out offers safety lessons officials a chance to engage with community

BY COURTNEY PELLETIER

BELMONT — All across America, Tuesday, Aug. 6, more than 450 communities across New Hampshire observed National Night Out. Some 40 communities in the Belknap County area participated.

National Night Out, held annually on the first Tuesday of August, is a safety campaign held in communities across the U.S. that was created by the National Association of Police Organizations in 1984. The event is designed to bring concerns of the community to the attention of local officials, and to create a positive atmosphere that encourages community members to talk about public safety issues.

The Belknap County 4-H Fair celebrated its 50th anniversary this weekend with a family-friendly line-up of events, such as horse and tractor pull, animal shows, and live entertainment.

The Belknap County 4-H Fair began in 1963 as a place where children could practice the competition of showing their dairy animals, and has since developed into a strong tradition.

“We have a lot of fun with the kids, but it’s also about teaching them responsibility,” said Chief Mark Lewandoski, who took over leadership of the Belknap County 4-H Fair in January, said his goal was to make sure the Department was “as active within the community as we can be.” There’s a general belief that 4-H should be a safe place for kids, and Lewandoski said he took that very seriously.

Lewandoski, who took over as head of the Department in January, said his goal was to make sure the Department was “as active within the community as we can be.” There’s a general belief that 4-H should be a safe place for kids, and Lewandoski said he took that very seriously.
village cafe offers simple forests, fields, gardens, na
four reconstructed Shaker
nual artists. Canterbury of an actual investment or performance may not reflect en days can add up, and before ting away money for college. And A financial aid expert
ning situations.
xt features a tour of everything from the
ch of providing a wholesome
"I am so excited and I couldn’t time to back to school means leak, or reckless operation.
cas. They asked me to sing
songs live.
279-3161
Jacqueline Taylor
sed in the Belmont Fire Depart-
is open daily from May 27-

388 Shaker Road in Caner made a big impression
-burns, Coca-Cola and Taylor
Next, Coca-Cola and Taylor
s Pelican, Left Night, Jeffery Brewer, Treasurer, Lisa Seymore, Tom Seymore, Director, last day another in position.

The average cost for one year at an in-state public school is $22,261, while the compara-
table expense for a private school is $42,444 according to the College Board’s figures for the 2012-2013
years. Of course, given all your other expenses, you might find it challenging to begin putning into a savings account. And with so many years to other expenses, you may find
Away from home, your child
r for your college savings, you’ll be well advised to start saving as early as possible spec-
ically when your child is
years of your child’s life.
On occasion, given all your
many years to a

The average cost for one year at an in-state public school is $22,261, while the compara-
table expense for a private school is $42,444 according to the College Board’s figures for the 2012-2013
years. Of course, given all your other expenses, you might find it challenging to begin put-
ning into a savings account. And with so many years to other expenses, you may find
Away from home, your child
r for your college savings, you’ll be well advised to start saving as early as possible spec-
ically when your child is
years of your child’s life.
On occasion, given all your
many years to a

The average cost for one year at an in-state public school is $22,261, while the compara-
table expense for a private school is $42,444 according to the College Board’s figures for the 2012-2013
years. Of course, given all your other expenses, you might find it challenging to begin put-
ning into a savings account. And with so many years to other expenses, you may find
Away from home, your child
r for your college savings, you’ll be well advised to start saving as early as possible spec-
ically when your child is
years of your child’s life.
On occasion, given all your
many years to a

This article was written by Edward Jones for use by your local Edward Jones Financial Advisor.
For more information, contact
Jacqueline Taylor, Financial Advisor, at 279-3161 or email Jacki at Jacqueline.Taylor@edwardjones.com.
Her office is located on 14 Main St. Downeast Maine. For more information, see http://www.edwardjones.com/ or “like” her on Facebook www.facebook.com/ EJAdvisorJacquelineTaylor.